Changing of the Guard (Pomp and Poverty Book 1) James Farner

“I thought my parents were killed when two runaway packhorses threw off their loads at the Ebonson Carrying Company...I was wrong.”

Queen Victoria ascends the throne in 1831 and heralds in a new era of prosperity for the British Empire. Whilst the great Norlong and Ebonson families fly the flag for the British Empire, Edward Urwin spends his time scratching pieces of art into the cobblestones of Birmingham.

Life is straightforward for Edward until a strange old man approaches him in the street. With the help of Henry Beechworth, Edward learns to read and use his special talents to win a place at St. John's Boarding School.

But it isn't all down to good fortune. Edward doesn't realise he's under control of forces far more powerful than him. Forces that are determined to shape him in their image. Forces that are determined to bury the mystery of the demise of the Urwin family for good...
