To Be Read on Halloween: Scary Tales, Lore, and More Joseph D. Clark

At midnight on All Hallows Eve the portal to the land of the dead opens and spits this book out to be found by a lone cursed soul. Within these pages are the finest and most terrifying short horror stories ever told. Each tale is separated by an eerie Halloween fact and famous Halloween quote. A man who is buried alive and returns as a demon, a deal with the devil gone bad, a giant eye which rises out of a lake and manipulates a man to commit murder, a little boy who traps his abusive step father in a tiny little bottle and throws him into a river, a Catholic priest who is also a vampire, a beggar who defends a fair maidens honor by slashing her detractor's throat, and more. Good old fashioned terrifying fun.
