Here's What's Really Wrong With Our Schools Dean Henry Gauger

Most Americans know that our high school graduates are falling behind the rest of the graduates from other industrialized nations. Shocking and depressing test scores in mathematics, science, language arts, and reading reveal that the majority of our kids seem to be merely treading water academically while their counterparts from China, Germany, Korea, and many other nations surge ahead with significantly higher academic performance. Here's What's Really Wrong With Our Schools reveals the rarely discussed underlying causes of this unnecessary intellectual underachievement and describes straightforward, practical, and affordable steps that must be taken now if America is to restore excellence to the classroom. Unlike many other books that focus on expensive and highly debatable solutions to our educational malaise, solutions that represent a radical departure from the core values of American society, Here's What's Really Wrong With Our Schools describes a method of changing the fundamental culture in our high schools back to one that features high expectations for student achievement and respect for the educational process. Dean H. Gauger, a National Board Certified high school teacher and veteran of 25 years instructing students in several states, describes in intimate detail the unbelievably inefficient ways (some would argue that they should be illegal) that many of our high schools are being administered. Students, teachers, and parents are being cheated by self-serving administrative policies that severely restrain academic performance in the classroom. Not merely a philosophical dissertation, this book describes actual success stories in which Mr. Gauger was able to turn failing students into A and B students by creating an atmosphere of excellence and high expectations in the classroom.
