Red Sky Morning Greg Liles

Red Sky Morning, is a horror story about a mailman who transforms into a monster and kills everyone in the town in which he lives, whenever the influence of his customers, who blame him whenever he delivers unwanted mail to their doorsteps, and the words of a book that was mysteriously delivered to his mailbox, become more than he can handle.

Carl Simmons has lived in the small, southern Illinois farming community of Johnsonville all his life and has delivered the mail there for over twenty years. He knows everyone on his route and about many of their personal affairs as divulged by the information on the envelopes of mail that he has tucked inside their post boxes. During the period in which he has been a mail carrier, Carl has been confronted many times by those who have received discouraging mail and blamed for the upsetting news that it has brought them.

He enjoys his job as courier, but spends his spare time with his best friend Max, a Border collie that he rescued from the side of the road, rather than with other people, to avoid any more accusations. He and Max have become so familiar with each other's body language and speech patterns that they communicate as effectively as if they were talking to one another.

It begins when Carl returns home one day after making his daily deliveries and finds a mysterious book in his mailbox that he is sure he did not put there himself. He reads the book and becomes captivated by it when he realizes the storyline parallels his own life, and the words of the author seem to be giving him a solution to the daily complaints.

The final straw is when a local man makes public accusations that Carl is responsible for the death of his son, who was killed while fighting in Afghanistan, just because he delivered the letter from the army. Carl takes revenge on Johnsonville, killing its inhabitants and setting them in scenes so they appear to be alive.

Travelers, Rick and Linzi, stop at the local gas station for directions when they spot a group of men playing cards through the large front window. When they go inside, they find the men are dead, and before they can get back to their car to retrieve Linzi's cell phone so they can call authorities, Carl smashes the mail truck into their car and forces them to run for their lives.

They search for survivors, but the only one they find is Max, who convinces them that he can communicate via the number of barks he emits and shows them the book that caused Carl's metamorphosis. They take the book, and Max leads them to the church for refuge, where they find Josh, Amy, Davey, and the reverend, already hiding there to avoid Carl's onslaught.

When they try to go inside the church, they find they cannot take the book with them. It's then they realize all the evil that has befallen Johnsonville is because of the book. They have to make a plan and quick, because Carl is on their heels, but when their attempts fail, Max goes into action. Find out what happens when Max grabs the book and dives across the threshold...
